CROOKS UP AGAINST IT

German Material Will Sound Death Knell of the Safe Blower.

The death knell of safe blowing as a "profession" has been sounded. The quick-witted, nimble-fingered "gentleman burglar," proficient in the use of explosives, to whom apparently the strongest and most up-to-date safe falls an easy prey, may find himself compelled to turn his wits to other ends than that of safe blowing. For safe blowing will be wellingn impossible in the near future. This not because city, state and federal police have devised any new and more affective methods of capturing the silk-hatted brigands. The authorities doing their best are apparently no match for the ingenious safe blower.

Strangely enough this war of science upon the safe blower has not started in Strangely enough this war of science upon the safe blower has not started in the United States, where applied sciences and mechanics have reached a greater height than in any other country on earth. It is from Germany that the new method of combating the safe blower comes. The Krupps, the world-famous manufacturers of ammunition and war implements, have set their coemists and engineers to work compounding a material strong enough to resist the largest quantity of explosives that the safe blower can carry with him and the best boring tools.

pable of teaching the chancellor of the exchequer his business.

Among other things on which it was said duties should be imposed were such necessities as boots, baths, lamps, hats, umbrellas, perambulators and theater tickets. Extraordinary though these suggestions were, however, they were not more so than some budget schemes which have actually been carried out in the past in order to raise the country's revenue.

In 1695, for instance, a tax of 2 shillings had to be paid by the parents of every "little stranger" born in England, except by people in receipt of alms. This tax fell heavily on the masses, to whom a floring meant a great deal more than it does to day. The nobility and the gentry, too found the tax very irksome, for it increased according to rank, the birth of a duke adding $150 to the revenue.

No small amount of fun has been made of the New Jersey state legislature some time ago imposing a graduated tax on men with beards. But it is by no means an original proposal.

Queen Elizabeth put a tax of 3 farthings on every beard of a fortnight's growtl, while two centuries ago Peter the Great insisted that all nobles who were beards should pay 100 rubles for the privilege.

On several occasions it has been said that the selfish individual who refuses to To litustrate further the enormous men with beards. But it is been said that the selfish individual who refuses to To litustrate further the enormous To litustrate furt

To illustrate further the enormous strength of this new material the Germon scientists say that to make a hole 3.2 inches in a plate of this material, 1.6 inches thick, with the oxyacetylene burner, the safe cracker would be required to pit in from six to fourteen hours' time. From 2.5 to 3.700 gallons of acetylene and from 2.709 to 4.559 gallons of oxygen would also be required.

would also be required.

The average sare blower can never have much time at his disposal. Nor is he ever in a position to supply himself with so much gas. A single steel cylinder in which compressed gases are transported contains about 1,400 gallons of uncompressed gas and weighs about 150 pounds. The burglar would have to have four such cylinders at the lowest to effect an opening into the safe. The transportation of so many cylinders and the other apparatus needed is a task so staggering that even the boldest safe cracker

HANGING THE WRONG MAN.

(By M. Quad.)
You see. William Bovers, was as much to blame as any of us, and being he was the man who was hung, he ought to have entered into particulars to a further extent than he did.

I shall always blame him that he

William was placid. I knew him for three years, and only three times did I know of his countenance underwick counties.
Secretary Smiley said: "In Seward, Mayfair to Buckingham palace attracted much attention. Speaking afterward and the west half of Clark counties the wheat crop is practically an entire failure. Nearly 40 per cent of the wheat sown in Ford county has been abandoned, and in Barton, Pawnee, the west half of Stafford. Edwards, Pratt and Comanche the percentage is 50.

One day, when some of the boys were returning from Pot-Luck creek with flour and pork they came upon the placid William Bovers in a bad situation. He was bending over the situation. He was bending over the body of a man named Powers, who had been settled by the thrust of a bowie, and his hands were bloody. The placid William was nabbed. What did he do? Just nothing at

What did he say? Why, when the boys laid hands on him he quietly remarked that he had discovered the body only five minutes before, and was inspecting it in hopes to discover signs of life.

Too thin!

Too thin!

Too thin!
And too placid to fit that crowd!
The camp didn't waste any valuable time over William's case. Within an hour a court was convened. William was arraigned, and the dead body was placed in sight of all. Circumstances were against the prisoner, but there were some things we forgot. William had been a quiet, honest, civil resident of Diamond Gulch. He had never been known to carry a bowie knife. er been known to carry a bowie knife He had been down the trail to wash some shirts and had discovered the body on his return. He scarcely knew the murdered man by sight, and could, therefore, have had no grudge against him. The victim had little or no money, while the accused had the biggest pile of any man in camp.

But placid William should have kicked. And he didn't kick worth a cent. He pleaded "Not guilty" in a careless, in-different manner, as if the result was of no particular consequence to him.

He toki about going to wash his shirts and of the finding of the body—but there was nothing anxious about him.

"If you believe me, let me go; if you don't believe me, bring on the rope."

That was the sum and substance of his defense, and it was bad for William. We hung William, but I'll be durnwhen it was too late we saw where

Then came a painful pause. It is a serious thing to kick a barrel from under the feet of a fellow man and let a rope catch and choke him to death. We felt it so, and when the pause came we could hear each other's hard breath

"William Bovers," solemnly remarked the judge. "You are about to hang!
"And now one more I ask you if you are guilty of the awful crime?

"No," was the equally calm reply.
But he had been tried, convicted and sentenced, and the sentence must be in a carried out. It was when the man ad-Bed-vanced to pull away the barrel that William's countenance lost its placidity.
